

Use this map at your own risk.

Heading to The MacIntyres

(Wright, Algonquin, Iroquois)
from Adirondak Loj
A long hike: allow 12h+
(i.e., summer, with sunrise start);
>400' elevation drop
between Algonquin & Boundary

Watch for junction at 1 mile; bear right.

Nice waterfall on your left just past the camping sign: an excellent stop for a breather.

This trail has suffered from too much love: please respect the efforts to restore it and always walk on the bare rock and where the trail has been clearly marked. There is plenty of signage to remind you.

Wright Peak is an up-and-back hike; approx 1.5 h return trip. If you're working on your "46", invest the time now to go to it.

Warning: A return loop is possible by taking trail "71" (on this map) down to Lake Colden, then out via Avalanche Pass and returning thru Marcy Dam. This trail (71) is considered one of the steepest, most heart-breaking trails in these mountains, so expect your knees to scream, particularly if you have covered the three peaks! Retracing steps over Algonquin & returning the way you came is recommended.

Iroquois Peak is an up-and-back hike; approx 2 h return trip from Algonquin. If you're working on your "46", invest the time now to go there.

